A Public Disaster

THE dynamiting of the Garland City state toll bridge yesterday, when it was virtually finished and only a few days before it was to have been opened to traffic, is a public disaster.

It is a disaster that hurts Arkansas in reputation, because news of it was telegraphed yesterday to every state in the union.

It is a disaster that hurts her in body, because the opening of a great state highway link has been delayed at least four months.

And finally, it is a blow to the morale of her people to realize that within her boundaries there are persons so uncivilized as to imagine anything good could come out of the willful and brutal and cowardly destruction of a work in which men and money had been tediously employed for an entire year.

Deaths of violence still live in the hearts of supposedly civilized men. We hear about an occasional man sneaking up on his neighbor with a shotgun in the dead of the night. But in 99 per cent of crime there is some curiously human factor that makes all the world akin. Yet this which happened at Garland City was different.

People who go about blowing up the great structures of civilization belong to the desert. They have no place in the hearts or patience of men who want to live together under a common flag.

The disaster at Garland City yesterday was like a chill out of red Russia. There is but one answer to that sort of thing—guns. And if a posse happens to catch up with the right persons it might as well give them our reply without waiting on the law.

Rules on Sufferance

MR. JAMES W. GERARD'S assertion that 59—or, was it 64?—prominent Americans really rule the nation has drawn fire from a number of places, and the discussion provoked by his remark will not die down for a long time. There have been indignant denials and vehement affirmations; certainly it is quite obvious that the financial and industrial leaders he names, if they do not actually rule us, at least exercise a tremendous amount of influence in governmental, social and economic affairs.

However, to admit that much is far from admitting that we are in the grip of a financial oligarchy. It may be perfectly true that such men as Morgan, Ford, Mellon and Rockefeller have things pretty much their own way; but that does not in the least mean that democracy, in the old sense, has come or is coming to an end.

Consider the matter for a moment. The political framework set up by the Revolutionary statesmen still exists unshaken, revised in places only to make the self-government they dreamed of more certain and more easily workable. Every adult citizen still has a vote. It is still possible for the government chosen by the people to put any kind of curb the people ask on big business. The people, through their representatives, can pass any kind of law they want.

It may be objected, of course, that this is only theoretical; that in practice big business and finance have such power over elected representatives that this government is largely a myth. But what of it? The power, in the last analysis, still remains in the hands of the voters. It is theirs to use whenever they care to use it.

To be sure, big combinations of business men have more than their share of power in the government today; but they have it, so to speak, on sufferance. Ford, Morgan and the rest are allowed to exercise power because the people are convinced that these men are giving the country good service. As long as they continue to do so the people will be satisfied.

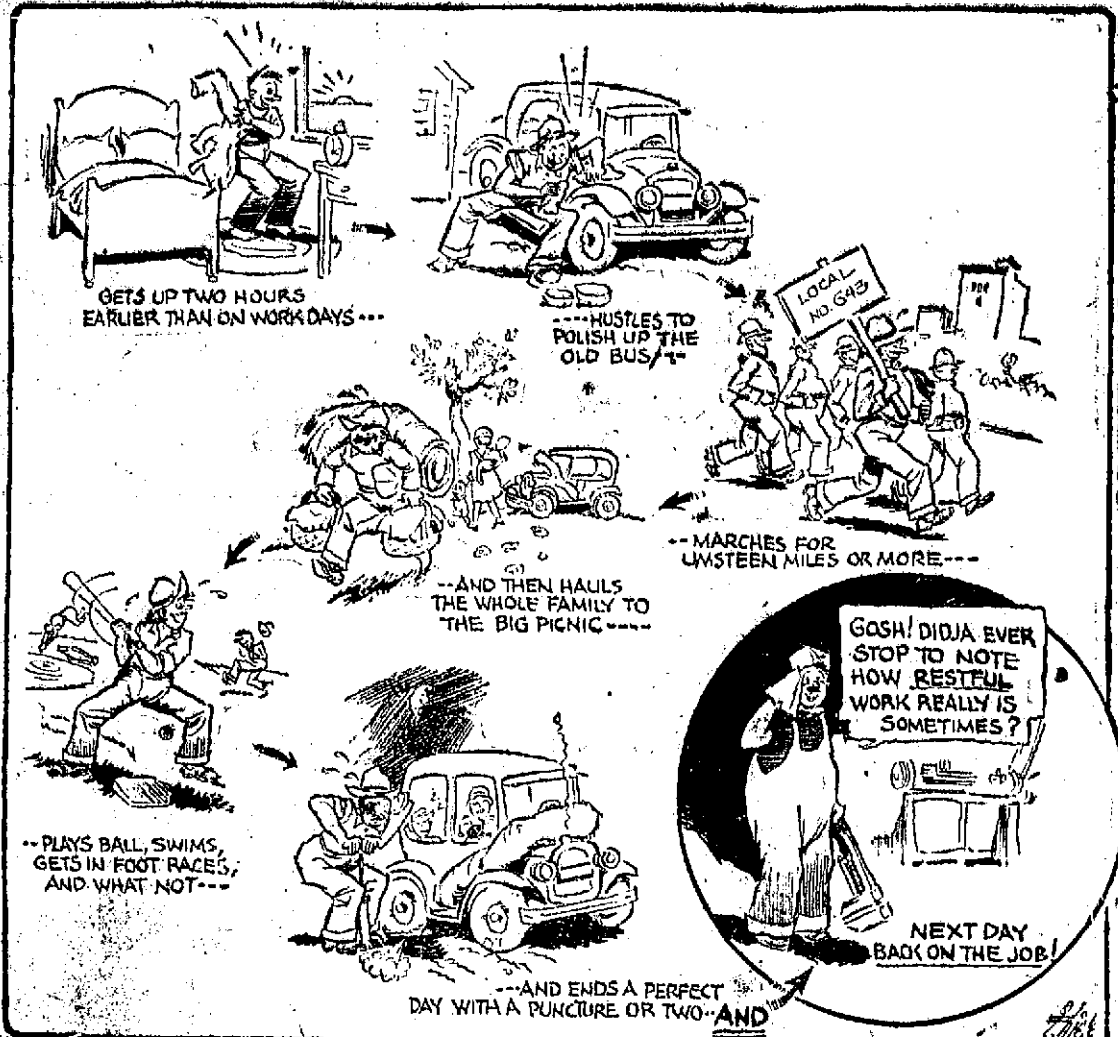

In other words, the power that these "rulers" enjoy is only a loan. The loan can be called at any time. The American democracy still has its hands on the reins. Self-government is by no means in a bad way, even if Mr. Gerard's assertion be taken at its face value.

The Wonderful Watermelon

ONE of the best little essays ever written on the watermelon is credited to the late William Jennings Bryan. Mr. Bryan wrote:

I was eating a piece of watermelon some years ago and was struck with its beauty. I took some of the seeds and dried them and weighed them; I found that it would require some 5,000 seeds to weigh a pound; and then I applied mathematics to that 40-pound melon. One of these seeds, put into the ground, when warmed by the sun and moistened by the rain, takes off its coat and goes to work; it gathers from somewhere 200,000 times its own weight and, forcing this raw material through a tiny stem, constructs a watermelon. It ornaments the outside with a covering of green; inside the green it puts a layer of white, and within the white a core of red, and all through the red it scatters seeds, each one capable of continuing the work of reproduction. What architect drew the plan? Where does that little seed get its tremendous strength? Where does it find its coloring matter? How does it collect its flavoring extract? How does it build a watermelon? Until you can explain a watermelon, do not be too sure that you can limit the ability of the Almighty or say just what He would do or how He could do it.

"Labor" Day—Is Right!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NRA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Fifty thousand young men between the ages of 17 and 31 are taking their vacations this summer at Uncle Sam's 53 Citizens' Military Training Camps.

The first year of this training system was 1921 and in that summer 12 camps were established with an enrollment of 10,000. In the year or two subsequent, before facilities had been expanded, many applicants had to be turned away.

Gives Big Reserve Strength
Three hundred thousand men have now gone through the four-week period at camp with the C. M. T. C. They have swelled the nation's total military reserve strength to about a million. For there are also 177,000 national guardsmen, 115,000 reserve officers and 400,000 members of naval, marine and other miscellaneous reserves. These groups would be depended upon by the government to form an experienced nucleus for America's armed forces in the event of any serious war.

The War Department pays for transportation to and from the army posts where the C. M. T. C. camps are located and reports that the course has proved attractive to thousands of young men who could not have afforded much of a vacation on their own expense, as well as to many who could.

College and high school students make up a large proportion of the C. M. T. C. companies. A report on 773 recruits enrolled at the camp at Fort Des Moines, Ia., drawn from Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, shows that 531 were students, 83 farmers, 32 laborers, 18 clerks, 16 teachers, nine merchants, five chauffeurs, one cook, one barber, one movie actor, one newsboy, one tailor, one athletic director and 33 of other trades and occupations.

There are four courses of study: Basic, for raw recruits; Red, for recruits not so raw; White, for non-commissioned officers, and Blue, graduates from which are eligible to second lieutenancies in the Reserve Corps.

The bugle blows at 6 a. m. in the C. M. T. C. camps and the boys dress, make their beds and sweep out the immediate vicinity. Then follows 30 minutes of calisthenics before breakfast. The War Department boasts of the food served in the camps. Breakfast contains wheat cakes, bacon and eggs and coffee with which to start the day. Drill and target practice take up the rest of the morning. In the afternoon there are lectures on civics and lectures on citizenship, rights and obligations to one's country, obedience to the laws, the importance of doing what you're told and so on.

There are lessons in first aid and the care of the sick and wounded and sightseeing trips to nearby historical shrines which are likely to stimulate the patriotism of the students.

Late in the afternoon comes an hour of recreation, baseball, swimming, volley ball, tumbling and wrestling, with teachers on hand to supervise.

Defies Death

While flames and smoke shot up around him, Barney Shields, above, newspaper cameraman, defied death in a burning building to get the pictures. This is only one of many thrilling incidents in "Hearts Hungry," a swiftly-moving new serial story, which begins Friday, Sept. 12th in the Hope Star.

Unemployment A Spur To Education

Large Enrollment From Persons Who Need Re-Training

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(UP)—Unemployment will give a tremendous impetus to education—especially adult education and re-education—it was forecast today by G. E. Marchand, president of the National University Society.

"Beginning with the very opening of the fall terms in schools of every kind," Marchand says, "we may expect to see greater numbers than ever applying for instruction in technical and commercial subjects. Night, continuation and commercial schools should lead.

"The reason for this is that the unemployed fall into three great classes: The young high school and college graduates who find themselves unequipped by an ordinary academic education to find suitable work; those who have been employed but are not now because they lacked modern business and technical education; and that older group who have been employed for years, but whose ideas and methods have become obsolete and who are now seeking re-education in modern business methods and ideas. They realize education must be continuous throughout life."

Marchand announced that the National University society, which, by means of motion pictures, stage plays and charts, provides an intensive review of modern business ideas and

They are: New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, St. Louis, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Seattle, San Francisco and Washington.

Marchand is a lawyer by profession. Twelve years ago, however, he attracted attention by spectacular success he had made in manufacturing. At the age of 36 his fortune exceeded $1,000,000. He then retired from business to found the National University Society, through which to teach the methods he himself has found successful in business.

It isn't what you mean to do a week ahead.
It isn't what you know you'll gain.
When all annoyances have fled;
It isn't what you dreamed and planned—
Such hopes are but a phantom band—
The day's work counts—
It isn't much.
The gain of those few painful hours;
But be content if there is shown
Some product of those sacred powers
Which guide each mind, uphold each hand.
Strive with the best at your command
The day's work counts—Selected.

Mrs. J. D. McCoy of Little Rock is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Herndon. Mr. and Mrs. Herndon have issued invitation for a pot-luck supper tomorrow evening at their home on South Main street followed by bridge, for the pleasure of their guest.

Mrs. J. Frank Miles was hostess yesterday morning to the members of the Wednesday Contract Bridge club and a few special guests at her apartment on South Pine street. Garden flowers brightened the rooms which were arranged for three tables. Guests other than the club members, were: Mrs. P. F. Witherspoon of Little Rock and Mrs. Sid Stamford of South America. Mrs. Lowthorp scored high for the club and the guests were each presented with gifts of remembrance. Following the game, the hostess served a delicious salad plate.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Burford, who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Johnson, left yesterday for their home in Pine Bluff.

Mrs. Verdo Barner and little daughter, Dorothy Ann of Okmulgee, Okla., are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gurner.

Misses Elmer Rose and Lura Reeder have returned from three months trip to California. Yellowstone park and other points of interest in the west.

Mesdames Wilbur Jones and Cecil Walker of Olan and Mrs. C. R. White of Columbus were shopping in the city yesterday.

The classification and registration of students in the various schools will be held next week beginning Monday, September 8. On Friday, Sept. 12, the elementary students will be classified in their various schools. Miss Arnold will be at Hopewell, Mrs. McFar at Brookwood, Miss Lillie Allen and Mrs. Henry Taylor at Garland, Mrs. Mary and Miss Milburn at Oglesby, the Junior High will be classified and registered on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week at city hall by Paul Hinant, principal of Junior High. On Thursday and Friday the senior High students will be registered and classified at city hall by Mr. Milburn, principal of Senior High. All new students, both white and colored, regardless of school, will be expected to secure a permit from the Supt. before being classified. Miss Henry, superintendent may be found in council room of the city hall, during the week beginning Sept. 8, and all those who have to secure a permit will find her there.

Graydon Griffin who has been the guest of Farren Green and other friends for the past few days has returned to his home in Camden.

Mrs. Florence Hodgins of Charlotte, N. C. arrived yesterday for a few days visit with friends in the city.

Mrs. Cooper was formerly Miss Mammie Mason of this city, who is widely known and has a host of friends.

Business Club to Enter in Contest

Will Prepare Manuscript and Send to National Headquarters

In order to enlarge records which ultimately will have historical value, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs is announcing a nation-wide contest for women for the best stories of the achievements of business and professional women submitted within the next two months. Word of the competition which is being held in cooperation with the Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries, of which Mrs. Oliver Harriman is chairman, has been sent to the 1,200 clubs comprising the federation which has a membership of 60,000 women throughout the United States.

According to Miss Emily Kneubuhl, executive secretary of the National Federation, the purpose of the competition is to add to the large fund of material on the progress of women in the business world already assembled by the federation as part of its service as a business women's organization.

The finest individual story of the achievement of a business woman submitted by October 1, will win the first prize of $50. The next best story will be given honorable recognition and a prize of $25. Records of odd and unusual occupations followed by women, stories of women who have built up businesses for themselves, who have attained high executive positions against heavy odds, or who have scored distinctive success in a field unfamiliar to women—these are the types of material sought.

"Increasingly," Miss Kneubuhl stated, "newspaper and magazine writers are coming to the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs for information as to women who are scoring unusual successes. Much valuable material is already in our files, but we are certain that there are thousands of human interest stories about business women lying unrecorded in hundreds of cities and towns throughout the country. It is this valuable material that we seek. As an organization we cannot inform too thoroughly ourselves about the history of women and we welcome this opportunity to join with the Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries in this attempt to gather information about women's accomplishments."

The contest is open to any woman in the United States whether or not she is a member of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The contestants may write of their own business success, or may tell of the enterprise of some other woman.

Manuscripts must not exceed 1,000 words in length. To be accepted, manuscripts must reach the offices of the Federation, 1813 Broadway, New York City, prior to midnight on the evening of September 31. Entries must be addressed to the Women's Achievement Contest. Two copies of each manuscript must be submitted.

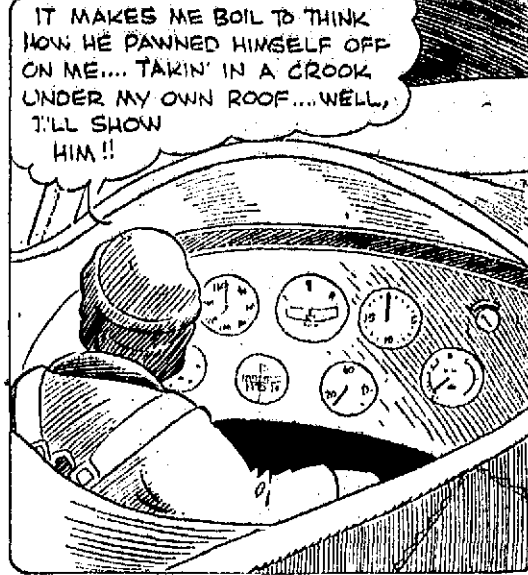

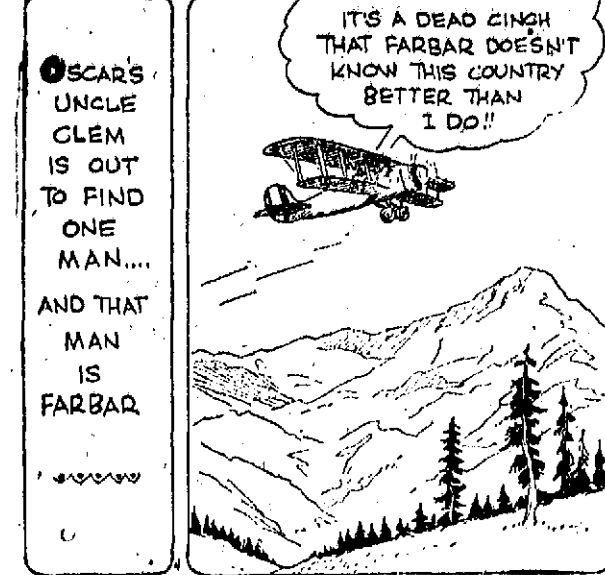

The Hope club voted at its meeting Tuesday evening to present at least two manuscripts in this contest.

Scenes From "Heart Hungry" a Thrilling New Serial

A few of the scenes from "Heart Hungry," a fascinating new love story, is pictured here. It is the story of Celia Rogers, 18-year-old high school graduate, who lives with her mother. Mrs. Rogers is estranged from Celia's father and is forced to work as a seamstress to support their home.

Celia, too, starts out in search of work. And then her father returns to claim her and she suddenly finds herself living amidst luxury. Then Celia meets—but you'll want to read the story to find out what happens next. Watch for it, beginning Friday, September 12th in Hope Star.

Where 6 Were Killed as Vandals Wrecked Train

This tangled mass of steel is all that was left of the locomotive and baggage car of the Fast Frisco Limited, "The Texan," after it was derailed near St. Louis, Mo., killing six and injuring 58 others. Railroad officials, in preliminary reports, stated that the 12-coach train was purposely wrecked by placing of stones on a long curve, by some person holding a grudge against the railroad, or possibly by train robbers.

A group of prominent New York women who are vice-chairman of the Exposition have been asked to serve on the committee of judges. These vice-chairmen are: Mrs. Sidney Borg, Miss Mar E. Dillon, Mrs. Walter S. Comly, Mrs. William H. Good, Mrs. B. Hunting Howell, Mrs. Winthrop McKim, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin and Mrs. Nettie R. Shuler. Judging of the manuscripts will be 50 per cent on their own merits and 50 per cent on the brilliance of the achievements they record.

The contest is open to any woman in the United States whether or not she is a member of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The contestants may write of their own business success, or may tell of the enterprise of some other woman.

I can use a few more of these melons to splendid advantage, especially I would like one to give to a group of entertainers known as the Beverly Hipp Billies. All of these boys are new finds only appearing before the public within the last six months. One of them is from Arkansas, Eldon Britt, 18 years old, from Searcy county. His singing of the old time Southern melodies is a sensation. He has appeared in the leading churches as well as being featured over KMTB. Commerce, Etc.

SAM BREADON, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, unburdened himself of a few well-chosen remarks the other day about the "commercial" side of baseball.

It seems that some sinister souls had been hinting that Sam's policy of moving up Monday games in St. Louis and making them Sunday double-headers was "cheapening the game." At least Sam so believes. In reply, Breadon frankly admitted that baseball was "a big commercial project."

"Those game am. I cheapening when we play to 177,811 for eight double-headers this summer," said Sam. "Of course, if this franchise loses money on a season's play, then the salaries of the players must be reduced the following year."

The double-headers have made money for the stockholders and the players. Besides that, it afforded extra entertainment and interest for the fans of St. Louis. If left to a vote of the fans, whether they wanted one game or two on Sunday, I am positive there would be a wide majority for the double-headers."

It Makes Good Reading. MR. BREADON'S remarks will be read with interest by a great many people. It may be that there are some sordid enough to remember the little speech during the hot stove season, when the matter of salaries and contracts for 1931 came up for discussion.

We are awaiting with pleasure Mr. Breadon's negotiations with one Burleigh Grimes, a pitcher who also has a keen commercial mind. We have just the faintest hint that Mr. Breadon will not begin to learn about the financial side of baseball until he has a little talk with Mr. Grimes. For it is anybody in baseball who knows what you're talking about when you speak of commerce, it's that same Grimes.

Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates used to think he knew something about the financial niceties of the game. That was until this spring, when he was rudely apprised of his own ignorance by this same Mr. Grimes.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

THE report that Jim Bottomley is to be traded away by the Cardinals has stirred the fans, says Sid Keener in the St. Louis Star. Sid has been receiving letters protesting the proposed trade... the report of a trade started several weeks ago in New York... Reporters asked Bottomley about it... Jim is said to have replied, "Well, I guess I'm going to see my new manager tomorrow," since the Cardinals were leaving that night for Boston. It appeared Jim thought he was about to be peddled to Beantown. Sam Breadon has nothing to say about the report. It so happens the Cards have a promising first baseman named Collins playing with Rochester this season.

Grimes. Barney, to be sure, is not alone. Other big league bosses have learned about money from Grimes.

He Teaches Them

THAT'S why Mr. Grimes has been something of a wanderer over the face of the baseball earth. Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, New York, Boston—baseball bigwigs in all these cities have been liberally educated by Mr. Grimes. The professor came, saw, demanded and went his way, leaving the chancellors of the exchequer gasping for breath. For Burleigh thinking of money in a big way.

This year, Mr. Grimes' picture was put on the cover of a popular baseball record book. We haven't been told whether or not Mr. Grimes has seen this picture or not. But if he has, Mr. Breadon is sure to know about it, too. That picture and those double-headers ought to be worth at least a couple of thousand vulgar dollars. And a dollar in St. Louis looks just the same to the mercenary Mr. Grimes as four two-bit pieces in Pittsburgh. Mr. Grimes is funny that way.

It is derived from the diary of Marie Leclerc, and reflects the life in the settlement of Fort Royal under Champlain three hundred years ago. The success of these folk song festivals especially in Quebec, has been attributed mainly to the growth of interest by Americans in this quaint province as well as in the only walled

Little Dog Rates Salute—He's 'Lieutenant Bobby'

"Lieutenant" Bobby Harris is "just a little brown dog," but his second lieutenant's commission is genuine and signed by a major general.

CAMP FOSTER, JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 4.—(UP)—He's just "a little brown dog," of uncertain lineage, but he is an officer in the army of the United States, and a "gentleman" by act of congress.

"Lieutenant Bobby," is his name, and he has a real commission, signed by a major general "by order of the president of the United States."

True, his commission was signed in more or less of a joke, but his master, Captain D. C. Harris, of Macon, Ga., commanding officer of Company C, 121st Infantry, says it is none the less genuine.

So, "Lieutenant Bobby Harris," is recognized for his rank and his seven years in the National Guard.

He goes to dances, funerals, formal army formations, or in fact anywhere his master goes.

"He's just a little brown dog," Captain Harris smiles when asked about the pup's pedigree.

Bobby got to be a real, honest to goodness second lieutenant when Captain Harris was at Ft. Benning, Ga., in 1927. Someone made out a commission for one "Lieutenant Bobby Harris," and shipped it into a pile of others to be signed by the major general commanding.

The general affixed his signature to all the commissions in the pile. So Bobby became what is believed to be the only canine with a commission in any of the armed forces of the United States.

Gar Wood Breaks Record and Defeats British Speed Queen

Gar Wood, U. S. speedboat king, his twin teddy bear mascots and Orin Johnson, his mechanic, are shown here after they had successfully defended the Farmworth trophy in a series of races against motor brought to Detroit by M. J. Betty Carstairs, British sportswoman. Wood averaged 77.39 miles an hour for the 30-mile course, bettering his record of last year by two miles an hour, in the final heat of the races on Labor Day.

New Home For Uncle Sam In Chinese Port

SHANGHAI, Sept. 3.—(AP)—A landmark of this Chinese port, over which the American flag has flown for 20 years, is coming down to make way for America's new consulate-general. The structure will be the finest of its kind in all Asia and will set a new standard for United States diplomatic buildings abroad.

The site, on the Whangpoo river, Shanghai's artery to the sea, is in full view of every steamer entering or leaving the port.

Destruction of the old building has begun and within two years there will be completed a million dollar structure which will furnish living quarters and office space for Edwin S. Cunningham, consul-general here for eleven years, and his entire staff of about a hundred.

The old buildings were erected about fifty years ago and when structures reach that age in Shanghai they are old. The soft mud brick of which they were made began to disintegrate years ago and great slabs fell away from various parts of the group until the structures looked as if they had been subjected to shell fire.

The foundations sank until floors were so uneven that steps had to be constructed between some of the rooms. So frail did the main office become that steel safes housed on the second floor were removed to the basement, lest they crash through and wreck the whole interior.

The Hollywood Story

by NEA SERVICE Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DAN RORIMER, former New York newspaper man and now a scenario writer in Hollywood, is in love with ANNE WINTER, who began her career in the picture business as a model and is now under contract to Grand United, one of the largest of the motion picture studios.

Dan formerly was under contract at Continental Pictures, but he was unable to get along with the studio executive there and he is now free.

Mr. Rorimer, who writes a daily column of movie comment for a string of newspapers, shares Dan's apartment with him. He has a wife in Dan's ability, despite the latter's lack of success as a free lance. Dan has become discouraged and over his apparently hopeless regard for Anne Winter, whose every step toward success to remove her all the further from him.

Anne lives with two other girls, Miss M. MONTGOMERY and Miss H. H. LEBY. Anna and Egan are extras, but Anna works only occasionally and Egan but rarely. She is bitter over this, and over a tragic love experience. Finally she leaves Hollywood, leaving behind a heartbroken note for Anne and Dan.

While in New York Dan had written a play for the legitimate stage. His agent, unable to place it, finally sends it back to him, and Anne Winter and Paul Collier, when they read it, are enthusiastic over it. They think it would make a great picture and urge Dan to revise it for the movies. Anne declares that she would like nothing better than to play the chief girl character. Dan follows their advice, and submits it to the studio.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIII

ANOTHER week slipped by. Paul Collier had gone to Seattle to spend his vacation.

"Think of me, my boy, on Mount Rainier, when the thermometer begins to sizzle."

He had asked Dan to write him if Grand United took his play, so he would have an opportunity to celebrate. Only, Paul had not said "it"; he had said "when."

Dan began to think the studio's silence was unreasonable, and once or twice he had half angrily been tempted to call, believing that Grand United should be told there were other studios in Hollywood to whom he might submit his play.

And then one day Phillips secretary called him and asked him to come over to the office. She said, with a smile in her voice: "I'm good news, Mr. Rorimer, and I'm very glad."

"That's mighty nice of you," he said, feeling that the world suddenly had become a much brighter place. "I'll be right over."

Phillips welcomed him with a broad smile and a hearty handshake. "Think we were never going to decide, Rorimer? Well, it wasn't my fault—nobody's fault in particular; we've been sort of up in the air and things have to take their turn, you know."

At any rate, he said, Grand United wanted to buy his play. "I think it's pretty swell, and what's more important, so does Mr. Johnson."

son. How much do you want for it?"

Dan gazed at him rather blankly, and Phillips laughed and told him not to look so flabbergasted. "Sit down. I just asked you how much you wanted for it, that's all."

"I haven't thought about that at all," Dan replied meekly. "All I could think about was whether it would suit you. How much is it worth to you?"

Phillips named a figure. "Is that satisfactory? I think it's very fair—more than you'd get anywhere else, probably. It's pretty high considering what we pay for most original stories, but I like your play and I think it's worth it."

"That's perfectly satisfactory," Dan said.

"GOOD. I've been wanting to talk to you about it ever since I read it, but I've been so busy these last two weeks that I've been dizzy. Your play's got a wallop, all right. You know, the night I took it home to read it we had company. Unexpected. They didn't leave until midnight, and after they'd gone I picked it up and sort of glanced at it, expecting to finish it the next day. Know what happened? I read it right through. It's got a great kick! I guess my secretary told you I was enthusiastic about it. Where'd you get the idea?"

Dan told him. Phillips smiled. "Well, now that we've agreed on price, I think we ought to have a little thing," he said, and he opened a little cabinet beside his desk and brought out a bottle and two glasses.

He poured one glass full, handed it to Rorimer, filled his own, lifted it to his lips, and he paused. "Happy days," he said.

And when he had set his glass down he spoke through the inter-office phone to his secretary and asked her to find out if Mr. Johnson was busy.

"The boss wants to see you," he told Rorimer. "Now that he's sold, he's sold hard. He's been asking a lot of questions about you and some of them I couldn't answer. You'll have to talk to him. Just between the two of us, he's pretty much interested in you. If he makes you a kind of proposition I hope you'll think it over, Rorimer."

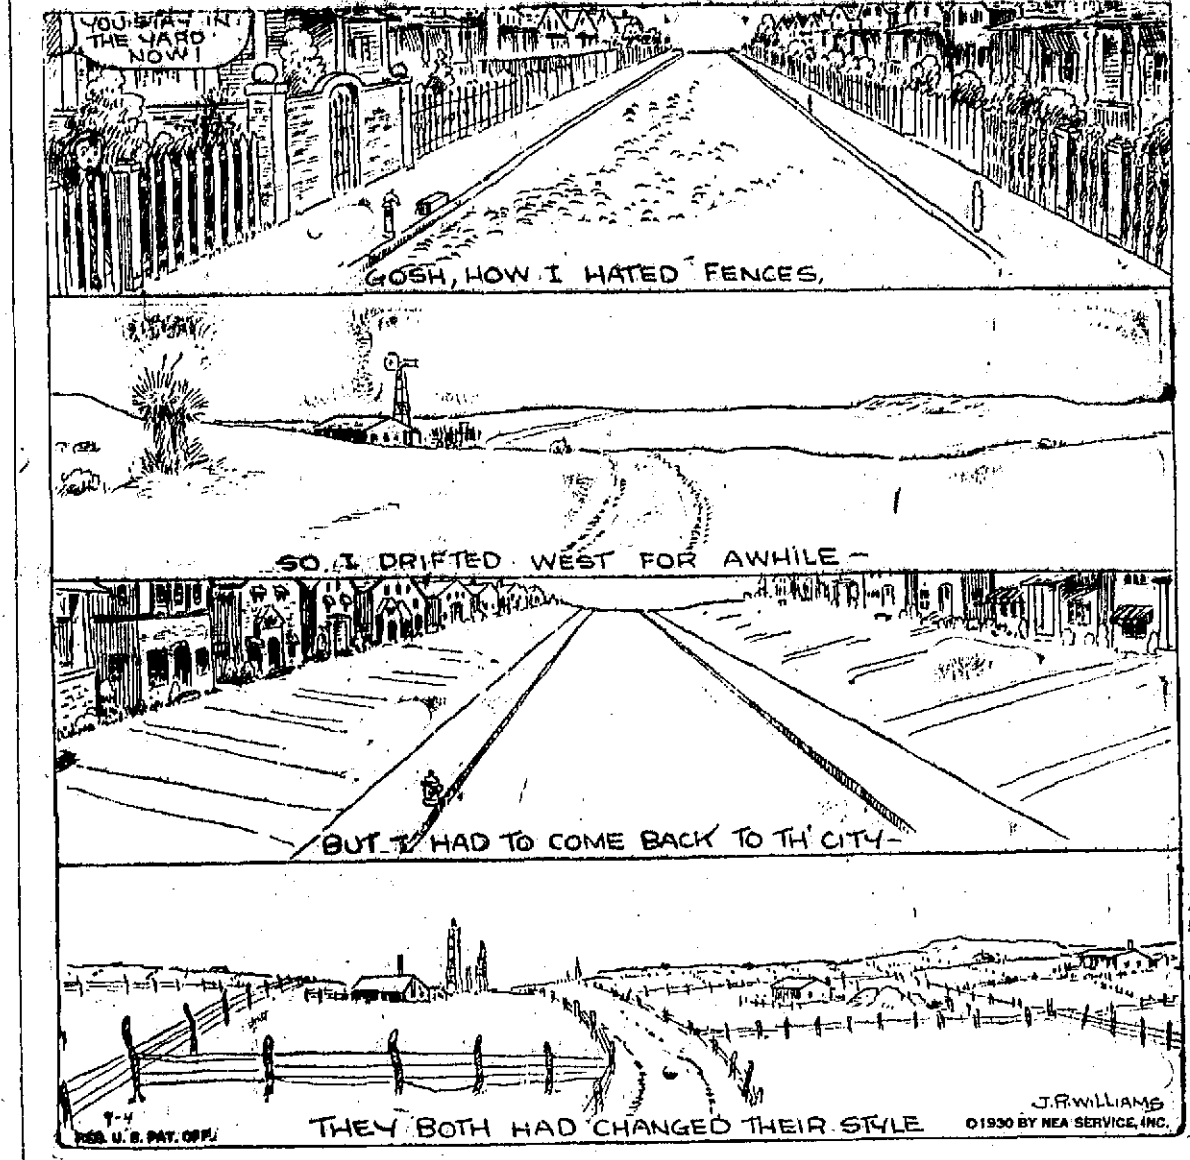

Dan nodded and murmured something. Everything, he reflected, came in bunches. Not only had Grand United bought his play, but now Phillips talked as if they meant to offer him a job. And he thought of Paul Collier up in Seattle. That would be something to write Paul, all right, if Johnson was going to make him an offer.

While they waited for his secretary to report, Phillips confided that "Tractor" would make a story for Lester Moore.

"We've been looking for a story for Moore, and this is made to order."

Dan could not repress a smile at this, and at the other's look of in-

Hospital Thanks DeAnn Women For Offering

The Board of Lady Managers of the Julia Chester hospital, wish through the columns of the Hope Star, to thank the residents of the DeAnn community who so generously contributed the lovely collection of canned fruits, preserves, jellies and vegetables for the use of the hospital.

These contributions mean much to the carrying-on of work where a maximum of charity is done. It acts as an incentive not only to the members of the board, who give generously of their time, but to the community at large, which has a desire to be of service to those who are less fortunate than themselves. Donations from any community or individual will be thankfully received. In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these, my children, ye have done it unto me.

With the government governing by publicly commissions and the parties campaigning by publicity committees, individual candidates and officials might as well follow Senator Borah's example and retire to the Main Woods. —Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Blind Pig Healthy

JERSEYVILLE, Ill. Sept. 4. — A pig that can neither hear nor see, is owned by Stephen Woolsey, a farmer residing near here. Despite the handicaps the animal is growing fat. The pig has eye sockets but no eyes, and the ears, which are normal in appearance, have no openings leading to organs of hearing. Woolsey believes the animal locates food by its sense of smell alone. When corn is thrown to the litter, the blind pig hustles around and secures its share.

Prompt Relief Follows Use Of New Medicine

Practical Nurse Tells How Konjola Relieved Stubborn Stomach and Kidney Troubles

MRS. ELIE MADDUX

"My stomach and kidneys caused me much distress and misery for two years," said Mrs. Elie Maddux, Okla. Ark., near Little Rock. "Gas formed after meals and I bloated so terribly that the pressure caused severe heart palpitation. My kidneys were weak and bladder actions were irregular. I was easily excited and my nerves were on edge the better part of the time. I was rapidly losing strength, weight and energy."

"I found the right medicine when I took Konjola. My digestion improved before I had finished the first bottle. In five weeks Konjola had cleansed my entire system and my general health had been improved immensely. My nerves are settled and I sleep well at night. I have gained six pounds in weight. Konjola is the best medicine I have ever used."

The experience of Mrs. Maddux is not exceptional in any sense. The files of Konjola are filled with the record of such experiences. It is recommended that Konjola be given a trial over a six to eight week period in order to obtain the best results.

Konjola is sold in Hope, Ark., at Briant's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Vetch Is a Splendid Winter Cover Crop

Many Farmers Who Have Grown This Crop Recommend It As a Soil Builder of Unusual Merit. Fall Planting of Vetch Is Urged

Many uses are found for hairy vetch in adding fertility to the soil, the South's leading legume. Several acres of this crop are being planted this fall by local farmers of this county.

Many of us are often too prone to sit back and brand something as not what "its cracked up to be," and never make any attempt to find out for ourselves what there is to it. Experiment stations have tried out Vetch under a number of varying conditions and have established enough facts to make it worthy of our serious consideration. However, many of us are still from Missouri and due to that fact, why not try out an acre or two on some fields that need building up. Give Vetch a fair trial by properly inoculating and planting it and see how fast it builds up the soil.

Of course there are other crops that will keep the soil from washing during winter and spring rains, but there are none adapted to this section that will accomplish all the beneficial effects as Hairy Vetch will do. Vetch can be grown on any types of soil and under a variety of conditions. It is an excellent crop to be planted in the cotton middles, in orchards, after corn, and in fact after any crop commonly grown in Hempstead county. Aside from its holding winter rains and snows until they are absorbed by the soil, when Vetch is plowed under in the early part of April enough nitrogen is added to the soil to be equivalent 400 pounds of nitrate of soda. This fact alone should solve a part of the commercial fertilizer problem which will confront the farmers again next spring.

Due to the depression in the economic condition caused by the long drought, many farmers of Hempstead county are directing their attention to methods which will materially cut expenses for next years crop. Now is the time when everyone should start building up their soil in order to cut down the needs for commercial fertilizers next spring.

But very little of the fertilizer applied to crops this year has been used up in crop production. Due to the fact that there has not been sufficient rainfall to dissolve all the fertilizer put into the soil, some method should be used to prevent its loss during the winter months by leaching or washing away by winter rains.

A row of Vetch planted about ten inches on each side of the cotton plants will make use of practically all the fertilizer applied to the cotton last spring, and then when the vetch is turned under next spring, a large portion of the unused fertility of this year will be made available for next season's crops according to Grover C. Kincaid, assistant county agent.

Vetch not only returns to the soil the fertilizer used in its growth but larger quantities of nitrogen is taken from the air and fixed in the soil equivalent to approximately 400 lbs. nitrate of soda.

Keen interest is being shown by several farmers in Hempstead county in the planting of Hairy Vetch as a soil improving crop. Since Vetch is a comparatively new crop in this county, Grover C. Kincaid, assistant county agent, has been conducting several demonstrations on Vetch inoculation and methods of planting to get the best results on the first year's growth.

Vetch is practically the only legume and real soil builder crop that will stand the winters in this section and due to the fact that it is such an ex-

Plan Legislation To Protect Game

Several Bills Expected to Be Introduced in 1931 Legislature Session

PINE BLUFF, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Legislation it proposes to sponsor in the 1931 legislature is being planned by a committee of the Izaak Walton League of Arkansas. Henry Jordan of Pine Bluff, president, has appointed H. T. Royce of Forrest City, as chairman of the league's legislative committee.

A dozen bills, or bills to strengthen existing laws, are proposed by Mr. Jordan for the committee's consideration.

They include bills providing for public hunting and fishing grounds; a closed season on all fishing during the spawning season; a size limit on bass, bream, crappie and rock bass; a bag limit on bream, rock bass and goggle eye; uniform hunting season on squirrels from Sept. 1 to Dec. 31, one hunting period for deer and turkey; licensing of all fishermen except those using worms, prohibiting the gassing or spearing of fish by using lights; increasing the cost of the non-resident hunting and fishing licenses; teaching of conservation in the schools; conservation of forest resources; and more game fardens.

El Dorado Contractor Low on Federal Building

EL DORADO, Sept. 3.—Construction of the new postoffice and federal building here will begin about October 1. It was said today by W. E. Smith, El Dorado contractor, who was low bidder. Smith's bid for $262,000 was approximately $20,000 lower than any other bid submitted and it is expected that he will be awarded the contract soon. Changes to be made by the government in the plans are responsible for the delay in awarding the contract.

Visitors Many At Grave Of War President's First Wife

The myrtle-covered grave of Ellen Louise Axson Wilson, first wife of America's war president, draws visitors to peaceful Myrtle Hill cemetery at Rome, Georgia.

ROME, Ga., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Many visitors come to Myrtle Hill cemetery here to see the well kept grave of Ellen Louise Axson Wilson, first wife of America's war president. The lot in which Mrs. Wilson is buried is in a prominent position in the cemetery. It always has been well cared for.

The grave is marked by a beautiful marble monument, executed by the Tiffany studios in New York, after designs approved by President Wilson himself. This labor of love was performed by President Wilson during his lifetime and at his own expense.

Mrs. Wilson rests beside the grave of her father, the Rev. S. E. Axon, who for 7 years was pastor of the Rome Presbyterian church. Buried in the family plot also is Mrs. Wilson's mother, Mrs. Jane Axson.

The stones marking the graves of Mrs. Wilson's parents and the marble tomb to the war president's first wife stand on the southwest slope of Rome's beautiful hilltop cemetery.

The monument to Mrs. Wilson bears this inscription: "Sacred to the memory of Ellen Louise Axson, beloved wife of Woodrow Wilson, Born 15 May, 1863, Savannah, Ga. Died 6 August, 1914, Washington, D. C."

"A traveler between life and death The reason firm the temperate will

Endurance foresight strength and skill

A perfect woman nobly planned To warn to comfort and command And yet a spirit still and bright With something of angelic light."

The Rome Chamber of Commerce recently adopted resolutions asking the City of Rome to improve roadways leading to the grave of Mrs. Wilson. A recommendation also was made that a new sexton's office be erected and located at the main entrance of the cemetery so that some one would be available at all times to give information and directions to those visiting the cemetery.
